Video File Conversion 101

File compression seems to be name of the game to see who can fit the most music and video onto today media deices. Unfortunately with so many compression formats and codecs, it becomes virtually impossibly for your head unit to support the multitude of song and video file types. To overcome the confusion of what video formats are compatible with this head unit, we suggest using a file converter to align the stars and change the many video file types you have to one standard.

Surely there are many file conversion apps available on the line, but CNet seems to be a reliable source and has a good file conversion app available. Check out:

Drop by our website for the link instead of typing a million letters and symbols into your web browser?

After the app downloads and installs, its pretty simple to convert your files. Select the Add File button and browse your computer to find the alien file type you need to convert. The file info should appear at the top:

There are some optional choices after the file is selected, like changing the name to protect the innocent, or change the location the converted file is saved. If you feeling frisky go for it:

Otherwise, choose the file format you want to convert your movie to. May we recommend the AVI:

You can also choose the resolution for the screen size and type. If youe converting an original file that is super high quality resolution, you might consider the HD options, but most commonly you should choose Normal Quality or Original Quality.

There are some fantastic options to change the standard codec, bit & frame rates, blood types, and so on, but we suggest keeping everything preset as the app recommends. It these crazy variables that brought you here in the first place.

Finally, click convert and wait for the bell:
